200 Essential Small Group Jazz Recordings: The Top 200 of 1925-1975

Compiled by Jeff Rupert

Director of Jazz Studies, University of Central Florida

This list comprises 200 of the most historically important small group jazz recordings. Represented is the work of every major innovator, as well as many of the great stylists. Thousands of recordings are currently available and it is often difficult for the young player to know where to start in building a collection. This list is by no means an absolute, but combines what I consider to be a complete overview of the masters and their music.

Notes on Charlie Parker Recordings: There are hundreds of studio and live recordings of Parker available. The Dial, Savoy and Verve recordings are the primary ones to seek out. Due to the limitations of pre-1950 recording technology (78 r.p.m. discs), sound recordings were no greater than three minutes in length. The many "live" recordings of Parker offer the listener an opportunity to hear Bird unhindered by these constraints.

1. Louis Armstrong – Complete Hot Five and Hot Seven Recordings (Columbia)
2. Louis Armstrong – Complete RCA/Victor Recordings (RCA)
3. Louis Armstrong – Ella and Louis (Verve)
